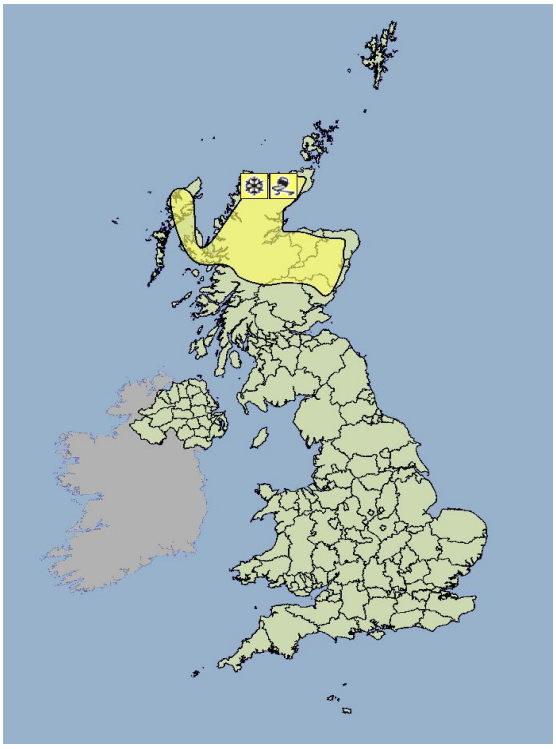
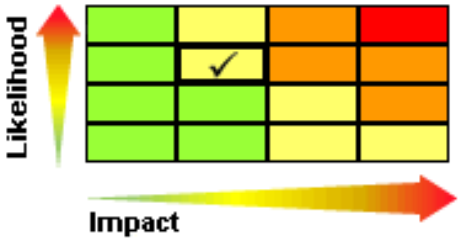
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A cold, showery northerly airstream will affect Northern Scotland for the rest of Friday and Saturday. By day, any snowfalls on the roads will be temporary and slushy, but some accumulations are likely tonight and early on Saturday morning.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Snow and Ice

Valid from 21:00 on Fri, 15th Apr 2016 until 08:00 on Sat, 16th Apr 2016

Wintry showers will continue on Friday evening, overnight and into Saturday morning. As road temperatures fall tonight, snow will be more likely to settle on roads and pavements. 2-5 cm is likely on ground above 200 m with 1-2 cm possible even to lower levels inland. In addition icy stretches are likely to form in the clearer spells between the showers. As temperatures rise on Saturday morning lying snow will melt.
